To Whom It May Concern:

When it comes to a Handyman, you need not look any further than Damon Grimaldi. Over the past 7 years, he has been taking care of my most valuable possessions, my house and my office. Damon has repaired everything from a hot water heater to motion detection lights. The professionalism he provides that is so often missing from his field speaks volumes to the services. Yes, Damon shows up which can be rare in itself. He also shows up on time. Sometimes he is already prepared with the part because he has you send a picture of the problem in advance. This makes his service more efficient because he can save you both time by avoiding that extra trip to the hardware store.

One of the aspects that amazes me is that Damon never leaves a mess. As a matter of fact, I usually do not realize he even came except for the fact that the item was repaired. The area is often cleaner than when I left it. Cleanliness is especially important because I am a doctor in a busy wellness clinic. I can keep my focus on my patients and daily operations without stopping my day to check in on Damon. The communication with us is usually a text and then an invoice later in the day. Who could ask for anything more?

To call Damon a handyman is an understatement. I think of him more as a caretaker. This caretaker will tell you what you need versus what you want. For example, I had a leaky valve on my hot water heater. Damon told me that it means the whole tank was going bad and that he did not recommended waiting for it to leak and cause a flood. He could have charged me for the simple repair and then came back for the more expensive job. Damon shoots it to you straight and charges a fair price. Listening to his advice will save you time, money and damage to your home.

Damon provides a level of service that makes you feel like he's your guy. Not just the guy you call. I wholeheartedly give this endorsement and invite you to experience the peace of mind when it comes to home repair.

Sincerely,

Dr. Jason Regis DC, MSHS, CSS
