

Before working with Bruce Sanders, I was struggling with one of the most difficult parts of being self-employed: securing affordable, reliable health insurance. With changes to the Affordable Care Act in 2026, my out-of-pocket premium costs suddenly tripled, putting pressure on my monthly budget and forcing me to reconsider whether my existing coverage was sustainable. I turned to Bruce at a point when I needed real alternatives—not just explanations.

Bruce walked me through private health insurance options that I didn't realize were available to someone in my situation. He compared multiple private plans side by side. Instead of pushing a single solution, he clearly outlined the tradeoffs between premiums, deductibles, and coverage levels so I could see how each option would affect me financially and medically. What surprised me most was how he found a private plan with premiums close to what I had been paying before the ACA changes, while still maintaining strong coverage.

As a result, I now have private health insurance that fits my needs without the financial strain I was facing earlier this year. My premiums are manageable again, my coverage is solid, and I feel confident in the decision because I fully understood my options before selecting a plan. For anyone who is self-employed or navigating private healthcare decisions, Bruce Sanders is someone I trust and highly recommend.
