Dear Peter,

For years, my husband has grudgingly completed our taxes. I am a Realtor that works with a broker as an independent contractor. We would take extra taxes out of my husband's pay check in order to mitigate our tax obligation from my income. We always worried that we were giving more of our money that is required to the government by missing write-offs and other opportunities to reduce taxes.

My income in the past few years has nearly tripled and I knew we could no longer do our own taxes without risk of financial harm to our family. We were so pleased when we met with you and discovered that we could let go of the stress and uncertainty of taxes by having you on our side as a trusted advisor, advocate, and expert. You made the process so incredibly easy. You gathered our documentation and made short work of organizing it and ensuring that we got all write-offs legally available to us. All of our stress was gone. In addition, you consulted with us to ensure that we minimized our taxes for the following year by maximizing retirement contributions and other legal write-offs.

Thank you for taking (most of) our stress away regarding taxes and helping us develop a strategy for protecting our finances and our family. While we still owe a substantial amount of taxes, we now have the comfort of knowing that we are not missing opportunities to minimize our tax liability as much as legally possible. In addition, you are able to give us advice on other ways to improve our financial picture. Thank you for the peace of mind and lower stress that allow us to focus on the most important things in life such as family and our future.

Sincerely,
