Leslie,

Thank you for stepping up and jumping in to put the colossal hassle of personal and business returns to bed . . . and finding a modest return where I was thinking I could potentially owe.

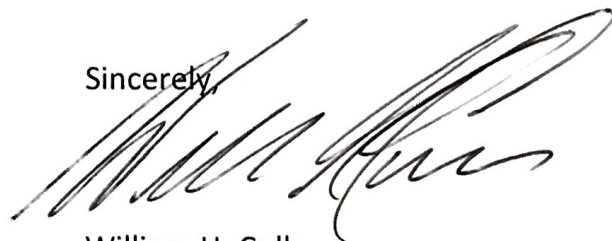

Even under steady conditions, filing tax returns is at best an unpleasant event and at worst a debilitating one.

My family and I having just moved to the area knowing just a handful of people, my longtime CPA having suddenly passed away, striking out with my first answer to filing my returns (stemming from a lack of confidence), and now seeing the clock running down I faced a tax season far shy of calm and confident.

You stepped in with a steady hand that immediately assuaged any concerns on my side, took the time to explain what needed to be done, and ultimately filed both returns with time to spare.

Thank you for affirming a gut instinct and I look forward to a productive relationship.

Sincerely,

William H. Cullo
