

1100 Peachtree Street, NE, Suite 575
Atlanta, Georgia 30309
404.975.3855
www.burneyandreese.com

January 24, 2022

Ms. Tanya S. Osensky, Esq.
Osensky Law LLC
Decatur, Georgia
tanya@osenskylaw.com

Dear Tanya:

I wanted to take this opportunity to formally thank you, and express my sincerest appreciation for your consultation and work in a divorce matter I recently handled. I knew how efficiently you worked, from my own personal experience, but you took a situation where I lost sleep at night, and made me confident that my client is protected.

It is not often that I handle a divorce wherein my client wants to continue to operate a business with a soon-to-be, former spouse. Frankly, it is not a request I want to receive or hear because there are so many potential issues and pitfalls; some that can be predicted and some that cannot. The only reason I agreed with proceeding in settlement discussions that included the continued, joint operation of the business, was due to your involvement and my client's agreement to use your services. You reviewed the proposed operating agreement draft, prepared by opposing counsel and thoroughly and meticulously outlined the issues. My client had a strict timeline (everyone going through a divorce wants it over yesterday), and you not only met the timeline, you actually beat it.

When my client reviewed your detailed notes, she immediately responded with, "I need Tanya to prepare the operating agreement." I could not agree more. You then took over, and spoke directly with my client, to address her concerns, desires and needs to be included within the operating agreement so she felt protected, and I felt comfortable signing my name to the settlement documents. After you drafted the new operating agreement, my client sent me an email in which she said, "The operating agreement has been finalized and I am thrilled with how much power I will have with this new agreement." A happy client; music to my ears.

Although I still hesitate when a client states that he or she wants to remain in business with a soon to be former spouse, I know I at least won't lose sleep, with you involved. Your expertise and knowledge of the law is profound; I learn new things from you in every conversation we have. Thank you for helping on this case, and ensuring the best result for my client.

I look forward to working with you again, or passing your name along to another individual in need of your services.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Kelly I. Reese".

Kelly I. Reese