Dear Matt,

Since you have been a member of the Emory PowerCore team, you've drilled into our heads the importance of a criminal defense attorney for even something as "small" as a ticket. When I was pulled over in Decatur for running a red light, I decided to put your statements to the test. I showed you the ticket at one of our PowerCore meetings, and you said "to not worry. I know the prosecutor well in Decatur."

From both what you have said AND my experience with you, it is about relationships. Everything you've said that would happen in your infominites, seven minutes, and coffee conversations occurred. You told me you'd get the ticket reduced to a non-reportable offense, and you did.

A good criminal defense attorney must have relationships with the prosecuting attorneys. Because of that relationship, you were able to work with the prosecutor and get the ticket reduced to a non-reportable offense.

Instead of going on my driving record and being reported to my insurance, I simply had to pay a non-reportable violation. The money I'll save with my insurance not going up would pay for your services... a win/win situation.

Thank you for doing such a great job for me, and being a valuable part of the Emory PowerCore team. I already felt confident referring you to potential clients, and this experience only reinforces that commitment to helping your business.

Sincerely,
