GHOSTBUSTERS

Ray Parker, Jr.

If there's something strange - in your neighborhood,
Who ya' gonna call? (ghostbusters)
If there's something weird - and it don't look good,
Who ya' gonna call? (ghostbusters)

Dear Lonnie,

There are few things worse than waking to the crash of thunder followed by a very loud hammer-blow to your home. When, at 6:30 in the morning, you walk out to investigate the source of the sudden shaking of your little nest, and find a tree limb in your living room which has just punched through your skylight – who ya' gonna call?

My call was to you - my Realtor; the man who had listed our home, found a buyer, and had secured a contract with a closing 6 days away. An Act of God had just made a modification to our house which necessitated a modification to our contract. Calm, cool and collected – you knew all the right moves to make to not only preserve the house but also to preserve the contract. What could have been a disaster in more ways than one became simply a platform for you to showcase your professional skills.

Hard times bring out the best or worse in people. I am grateful that you were willing and able to answer the call and within the hour be at the house and, at your best, help us navigate this unplanned interruption. Clearly your skills and devotion to your clients set you apart from the pack.

For all my realty needs, and with an endorsement to anyone else I know to need this kind of help in the future - Who am I gonna call? Speed dial #6: Lonnie Anderson!
