Dear Ward,

There are a number of reasons that people call for immediate attention from a roofing company. Those of course can vary from a hail storm to a crushed roof because of a fallen tree. Real estate agents often need to refer people who need new roofs. However, our most dire need is often someone to fix an immediate roof problem prior to the closing of a house.

Recently I heard you give an excellent presentation about the kind of roofing job your company performs on a regular basis. Because I have a bit of a history with roofing myself, I could tell quickly that you knew what you were talking about and that your company went far and above those typical in your industry. The question still remained whether your performance in the field would equal the high bar of your remarks!

One of my last real estate sales demonstrated your ability to help quickly when the circumstances required it. Your company's work was timely and excellent and my clients are still commenting on the video you took of the roof to show them the exact nature of the problem and its remediation.

It is without hesitation that I will continue to recommend you and your company for every roofing project that comes my way!

Best Regards,
